Blenheim Lodge, Bowness-on-Windermere

Built by a wealthy Mancunian merchant, Blenheim Lodge was originally part of one gentleman's residence/holiday home. The original owner chose this elevated site well to give superlative views out across Lake Windermere with its backdrop of majestic fells. Built in 1868, it is believed that it was separated from the adjacent property in 1912 and has been used as a guest house since the early 1950s. A lovely property with many original character features typical of its period of construction, the 11 letting bedrooms and public rooms are spaciouly laid out over three floors with the owners having the benefit of a generous 2/3 bedroom apartment on the lower ground floor. With plenty of car parking, the property occupies a lovely quiet position on the edge of the village.

The village of Bowness on Windermere dates back to the 11th century when the Vikings settled there beside England's longest and largest lake. Now home to The World of Beatrix Potter Attraction, Bowness is one of the best-known villages in the Lake District National Park, attracting hundreds and thousands of visitors to this beautiful corner of England. For the seasoned walker, the central fells so loved by Alfred Wainwright provide a superb range of challenges whilst the lower paths and lakeside walks from Ambleside in the north to Lakeside in the south - together with the charm of Windermere's steamers - offer less energetic alternatives. With its superb connectivity, Bowness also makes for a great central location to explore Ambleside, Grasmere, Keswick and beyond.

For long distance hikers, The Dales Way is a beautiful long distance footpath a mere minute's stroll from Blenheim Lodge. Frank Sanderson, a former owner of the guest house and a co-founder of The Dales Way Association, was also instrumental in the creation of the Lakeland stone Dales Way Seat. Blenheim Lodge is the first guest house off The Dales Way in Bowness on Windermere, making it an ideal place to stay for Dales Way walkers either coming off or beginning their hikes on this beautiful trail. The Dales Way and its eponymously named seat can be seen from some of the guesthouse's bedrooms - testaments to the history of Blenheim Lodge and its contribution to the Lake District National Park

Blenheim Lodge was acquired by the present owners in 2002 and during their ownership they have methodically gone through the guest house, upgrading it throughout to provide 10 en-suite letting bedrooms and one with a private bathroom, with all now appointed to a high standard. They have not only replaced virtually everything in the guest house, but they have also ensured that they have had spacious accommodation in which to bring up their family. During their ownership of Blenheim Lodge, they have always traded at a level to provide balance between income and quality of life. There is therefore much potential for a new owner to benefit from being able to very significantly increase turnover. Having enjoyed their years at Blenheim Lodge, the owners are now looking to retire.
