HISTORY

From its founding in 1920, the Indianapolis Coca-Cola bottling plant was one of the showplaces of American industry, recognized for both beauty of design and efficiency of equipment. Epitomizing enterprise and success, from horse-drawn delivery to over 70 Coca-Cola trucks, the plant was said to be the largest bottling plant in the world, with 260 employees producing 2,352,000 bottles of Coca-Cola per week.

In 1920, the building at 860-862 Massachusetts Avenue was owned by Leo E. and James S. Yunker. Grounded in American tradition, it was the Coca-Cola Bottling Company of Indianapolis.

1940

Jim and Lee Yunker celebrate their 25th anniversary as bottlers of Coca-Cola Indianapolis and announced an expansion of the factory. In 1949, the main addition to the plant was made making it the largest Coca-Cola bottling plant in the world. Local architectural firm, Rubush and Hunter, designed the plant in art deco style. It has since become an Indy Landmark.

The plant was sold to Indianapolis Public Schools when a new plant was opened in Speedway, Indiana. Since 1971, the building has housed the IPS Service Center.

An architectural rendering of a modern, multi-story office building at dusk. The building features a prominent grid of windows, many of which are illuminated from within, creating a warm glow. The facade is composed of dark, possibly metallic, panels that frame the windows. The building is situated in an urban environment, with other buildings and trees visible in the background. The sky is a mix of deep blue and orange, suggesting the time is either dawn or dusk. The overall mood is professional and inspiring.
