Upstate, SC

Comprised of Spartanburg, Greenville and Anderson, the Upstate region of South Carolina boasts a top-ranked pro-business climate, exceptional quality of life and a world-renowned research environment supported by quality institutions of higher learning. The region consistently earns a low cost-of-living ranking among large U.S. metropolitan regions, allowing a higher quality of life at a lower cost for the region's residents.

In addition, incentives like favorable tax rates, market accessibility and the quality and availability of workforce have attracted more than 350 international firms from 32 countries to the Upstate.

Automotive, advanced materials, aerospace, energy and bioscience industries make up a large component of the region's economy. Professional and business services, manufacturing, and trade, transportation and utilities are among the region's top employment sectors. In 2013, the South Carolina Inland Port (SCIP) opened, linking the Upstate to the Port of Charleston via an overnight Norfolk Southern rail service. Anticipated annual capacity for the SCIP is 40,000 containers with up to 100,000 by 2018. The inland port has outpaced projections and performing 100,000 container lifters per year as of 2017. Manufacturers are continuing to develop distribution facilities near the SCIP to take advantage of lower costs and efficient logistics.

The Upstate region as a whole, continue to support the success and growth of existing and new companies throughout the region. In order to attract and retain a quality workforce, the Upstate offers numerous outdoor activities, a world-class collection of museums and galleries, and signature restaurants, shops, and boutiques, creating a unique and contemporary environment sure to keep residents, employees, and visitors entertained.
